PITCH DECK | ADYEN STRATEGIC PRICING MANAGER

Your North America region needs one pricing voice across local markets, products and payment methods. I have already run that exact loop at regional scale.

Pricing strategy, financial modeling and deal pricing support from someone who builds pricing tools on the side.

- $700K+ margin recovered in 2 quarters, Sensata Bleeders and Leakers program
- 53% to 61% distributor margin lift via repricing logic that stuck
- 1,200 pricing opportunities ranked against a $627M target, 3 regions
- PriceKeel - founder of a decision-integrity layer for B2B deal pricing
- +12% YoY revenue, +8% share via regional price realignment

WHY THIS DECK EXISTS

The problem is not that Adyen lacks pricing insight. It is that a region sells local markets, products and payment methods at once, and a global price guide cannot see all three.

What pricing one region on a global platform runs into

A price that reflects value in one local market reads as a discount or an overcharge in the next, so "set the best possible price" has to be answered market by market, not once for the whole region.

The commercial organization, Sales, account management, product management and Finance, all touch the same deal, so a pricing initiative only sticks if every one of them can act on it, not just read it.

A global pricing tool only earns regional adoption once it saves someone a real decision. Feedback that never reaches the global team gets rebuilt locally instead of fixed once.

What I have already run, at regional scale

At Sensata, I led pricing strategy for a multi-$100M Industrial BU across 3 regions and 4 product families at once, the same "one pricing logic, several local realities" problem.

I ran the Bleeders and Leakers program: a Power BI system that ranked pricing opportunities by region and product family against a hard revenue target, so regional leadership knew exactly where to act.

I am now building PriceKeel, a tool that gives Finance an audit trail for every discount decision, because a pricing team only trusts a tool it can explain to the person who approved the exception.

A Strategic Pricing Manager who develops pricing for local markets, products and payment methods, partners with regional leadership and stakeholders, and drives adoption of global pricing tools, is describing this exact loop: one pricing logic, several local realities, held together by a tool people actually use.

THE REQ, MAPPED

What the Strategic Pricing Manager opening asks for, and where the proof sits.

What the role covers

> "Develop and implement pricing and monetization strategies for local markets, products and payment methods."

> "Partner with regional leadership... and key regional stakeholders to convert business needs into new pricing initiatives."

> "Provide deal pricing support on the region's most strategic and high-value deals" and "drive adoption of global pricing tools."

My Proof

Pricing for local markets and products: ranked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions and 4 product families at Sensata.

Partner with regional leadership and stakeholders: the 53% to 61% distributor repricing required sign-off from Finance on the model and from Sales on what a partner would actually accept.

Deal pricing support on strategic deals: partnered with senior executives on AP26 revenue models and multimillion-dollar customer quotes on the BU's highest-value accounts.

Drive tool adoption: building PriceKeel's guardrail engine and audit trail now, the same discount-governance tooling a regional team has to actually use, not just receive.

THE SENSATA PROOF, IN DEPTH

Bleeders and Leakers: find the regional leak, close it, make it hold.

Built as a BU-wide Power BI system covering 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions, 4 product families and 20 product lines, with pipeline funnel, win rate and stage distribution by region and product line.

$433M

Margin Shortfall Surfaced

The dashboard's job: rank every pricing opportunity by competitive shortfall and customer willingness to pay so regional leadership could prioritize instead of chasing anecdotes.

$700K+

Margin Recovered in 2 Quarters

Closed through cross-functional negotiations built on competitive analysis, market by market, not an across-the-board price hike.

53% to 61%

Distributor Margin Lift

Repriced the channel logic itself, so the gain outlived the initial repricing pass instead of drifting back within a quarter.

The same BU also ran a financial model flagging line items where a price change could lift profitability more than 50%, and multimillion-dollar customer quotes built alongside senior executives on the region's most strategic accounts. The common thread: every fix was local to a market or product family, and every fix was measured after it shipped.

FIRST 30 DAYS

What the first month as Adyen's North America pricing expert looks like.

WEEK 1

Map the region's pricing surface

Pull the last quarter's deal pricing requests and discount exceptions by local market, product and payment method. Sit with Sales, account management and Finance to hear where the global price guide breaks down on a regional deal.

Why first: the leak is usually visible in the data before anyone has named it out loud. Same move that started the Bleeders and Leakers program.

WEEK 2-3

Model and pressure-test

Build a value-based pricing model for the region's top 3 pricing questions, pressure-test it with regional leadership and the commercial team, then ship one pricing initiative with a documented, cross-functionally-agreed reason.

Why now: modeling against a hard target, then verifying the fix cross-functionally, is what made the 53% to 61% distributor gain stick.

WEEK 4

Channel feedback, drive tool adoption

Turn the one-off fix into a template the region reuses, and send what the global pricing tool is missing back to the global team instead of letting the region rebuild its own workaround.

Why this fast: "drive adoption while channeling regional feedback" only works if both directions move in the first month, not just one.

CLOSE

You are hiring the first point of contact for regional pricing questions. I have already been that person for a multi-$100M business, and I am building the tool for the next one.

The core proof is Sensata: $700K+ in margin recovered in 2 quarters, distributor margins lifted from 53% to 61%, and +12% YoY revenue with +8% market share from price realignment, all run across 3 regions while partnering with senior executives on the business's most strategic customer quotes.

What is harder to find is someone who has also spent the last several months building the discount-governance product a pricing team eventually wants internally. I am building that at PriceKeel right now, so the regional pricing instinct this role asks for, and the entrepreneurial mindset to prioritize fast, are not things I would need to develop on the job.
