Hiring Team, Plaid

Your posting frames the Payments PMM job as making Plaid the method of choice for Billers, Fintechs and Financial Institutions, which is a positioning problem before it is anything else. I have run that exact problem before. At Sensata I owned the GTM for a new sensing product line end to end, positioning, pricing, channel and launch, and turned technical specs into customer value language that lifted conversion 15% on our priority launches while driving $2M+ in first-year revenue with a network of OEM and distributor accounts.

The JD also asks for ongoing competitive analysis feeding positioning, and collateral that Sales, Enablement, Design and Comms can actually use. I ran competitive and customer analysis across EMEA and the US at Sensata, tying purchasing patterns and competitor share back into how we pitched. I built the sales enablement decks and case studies that came out of that work for 50+ reps, and win rates went up 30% once the whole team had one consistent story instead of five different ones. As Pricing Lead I also sat with senior executives on multimillion-dollar customer quotes, so I am used to turning a technical trade-off into language a commercial audience will actually sign off on.

The fintech-payments angle is not new to me either. I am building PriceKeel, a decision-integrity layer for B2B SaaS deal pricing that gives Finance and RevOps an explainable, auditable reason to trust a discount instead of just hoping it holds up. That is the same trust problem your network is solving for banks and billers at a different layer of the stack, and it is why the mission reads as familiar rather than aspirational to me. At Applied Materials today I automate the repetitive side of market and competitive analysis with AI agents built on Claude, which frees up more of my week for the customer-facing side of the job.

What I would bring to this role is a positioning and enablement muscle that has already shipped a launch to a real revenue number, plus a pricing background that understands why a finance buyer hesitates before they say it out loud. Proof trail at adhi-product-ai.vercel.app/ref/plaid.
