Hiring Team, Google

At Pixis I managed an 8-client portfolio where the real job was never just acquisition: the board cared about who stuck around. I cut churn 50% by diversifying channels and building vertical playbooks per account, then used that same retention lens to push a fashion brand to 3x ROAS in a single month through a full-funnel rebuild, not another round of top-of-funnel spend. That is the muscle a subscription product needs: campaigns judged on who keeps paying, not just who clicks.

Your posting asks for scaled campaigns across multiple channels with a global business strategy behind them. At Plug Power I owned $100K/month across multiple business units, ran Paid Search and Paid Social across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn at once, and backed every channel call with 15+ A/B tests, landing -25% CPA and a 20% conversion lift. At GenY Medium I rebuilt Google Merchant Center and Meta catalog feeds to 16x ROAS for D2C brands. Different products, same pattern: set the experiment, read the data, move the budget.

The cross-functional piece is already how I work. At Sensata I ran launch campaigns across email and paid that drove +35% qualified leads, then built the SQL and GA4 KPI framework that told product, sales and engineering which cohorts were actually adopting. Right now at Applied Materials I build the forecasting models that sit between those same functions, and I have automated the repetitive side of that analysis with AI agents built on Claude so the hours go to the calls that need judgment.

I would like to bring that acquisition-to-retention full-funnel habit to a subscriber base the size of YouTube Premium's.
