Hiring Team, A10 Networks

Your posting asks for someone who can turn a stack of channels, an agency roster and a comp plan's worth of pipeline targets into one coordinated campaign, and that is the job I already do. At Plug Power I owned $100K/month in integrated campaign budgets across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn, ran my own bid optimization and creative testing to cut CPA 25%, and automated the Pardot-to-Salesforce handoff so cost per lead dropped 50% without adding headcount.

Running that discipline across many accounts and regions at once is the harder half of this role. At Pixis I managed budget, agency and vendor relationships for 8 client accounts, each with its own $15K-$90K monthly spend, cutting churn 50% through account-specific strategy rather than bigger budgets. At Sensata I built the sales enablement that 50+ reps actually used, lifting win rates 30%, and I know what it costs a campaign when messaging drifts between field, digital and the deck a rep brings into a deal.

I think campaign performance reporting usually fails not because the data is missing but because nobody reconciles pipeline-contribution numbers across the CRM, the automation platform and the spreadsheet a regional lead builds for the quarterly review before it reaches a leadership deck. I built that reconciliation at Sensata with KPI frameworks in SQL and GA4 across 50K+ connected devices, and I automate the same kind of repetitive reporting now at Applied Materials with AI agents built on Claude, so the analysis gets done once, correctly, instead of three times by three teams.
