Hiring Team, Blacksmith Agency

At Pixis I ran eight clients at once on my own media budgets, $15K to $90K a client per month, and cut churn 50% doing it. That is the seat you are describing: one person owning the targeting, the budget calls and the client relationship on a paid-media-only book, no SEO lane to split focus with.

Budget allocation and the kill call are where I actually live. At Plug Power I owned paid search and paid social across Google Ads, Microsoft Ads, Meta and LinkedIn with budgets up to $100K/month, running bid and creative tests that cut CPA 25% and taught me which campaigns earn more spend and which get killed before they burn more of it.

A client only believes a ROAS number if the attribution behind it holds up. I closed the loop on Mar-Tech reporting (Salesforce, Adobe Analytics, GA, Google Tag Manager) at Plug Power so every KPI a client saw was one I could stand behind, and built the same discipline into GA4 and SQL frameworks at Sensata. That is the bar I would bring to your conversion tracking across GA4, tag manager and platform pixels, and to the 90 day and quarterly roadmap that explains the numbers on the call.

Retention is the other half of the job. The 50% churn cut at Pixis came from treating every account as a relationship to grow, not a budget to defend, and I would run your book the same way, fewer surprises and more upsell conversations earned by the numbers. I am also automating reporting QA with Claude AI agents in my current role at Applied Materials, and would like to put that same instinct for cleaner attribution to work on your client roster.
