Hiring Team, Chtrbox

Chtrbox went public on the BSE SME platform this year and is now opening a Dubai hub, which means the company that used to run on a founder's instinct now needs someone who can turn "we are expanding" into a list of owners, decisions and dates. That is the job I already do. At Sensata I took a vague mandate, margin was leaking somewhere across a $627M business, and built the dashboard that turned 1,200 scattered pricing opportunities into a $433M shortlist prioritized by salesperson and product line, then negotiated $700K plus of it back in two quarters. Nobody handed me that mandate; I built the system that produced the answer.

I am also the person who tries to make sure the next version of that problem does not need me in the room. At PriceKeel, the company I founded, I designed the guardrail engine and audit trail that lets Finance check a pricing decision without calling me first, and I set up the CRM, CPQ and deal-approval process from zero while running early customer pilots and raising the company's first round. At Applied Materials today I turn ambiguous input from Sales, Engineering and Accounts into one market-sizing view for a segment expanding across multiple product groups, and I automate the repetitive side of that synthesis with AI agents built on Claude, the same instinct toward audience and analytics automation Chtrbox is building into its own product.

Every job I have had has required the same move: build the leadership decks and OKR cadence that keep a business aligned, then sit with the people actually doing the work when the plan stops matching reality. I have done that with distributor partners at Sensata, with an 8-person team running client accounts at Pixis, and now with a founding team raising its first round. A publicly listed creator-economy company opening a second market is exactly the kind of cross-functional growth mandate I want to run next, sitting next to the person who owns the whole agenda.

What I would bring on day one is a habit of turning an open-ended priority into a number, then building the mechanism that keeps producing it. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/chtrbox.
