Hiring Team, Hinge Health

At Pixis I ran paid media and account strategy for an 8-client portfolio and cut churn 50% by catching disengagement early and acting on it before an account went cold. That is the same problem your lifecycle campaigns are built to solve for members who stop their program and need a reason to come back, just measured in members instead of client accounts.

The rest of your basic qualifications map just as directly. At Sensata I ran email and paid launch campaigns for new product lines, generating 35% more qualified leads, then turned technical capabilities into consumer-facing value propositions that lifted conversion 15% on priority launches, the same job of translating a new program into messaging people act on. At Plug Power I ran 15+ A/B tests across paid and landing flows on real hypotheses, not guesses, cutting CPA 25% and cost per lead 50% along the way, and I partnered with data and engineering teams at Applied Materials to keep forecasting models honest.

Your posting is specific that you want someone already using AI day to day, not someone who will get there eventually. I already automate analysis and reporting with AI agents built on Claude at Applied Materials, and I would bring that same habit to personalizing member communications with your AI and product teams, pushing it further rather than treating it as a side project.
