Hiring Team, Ambience Healthcare

Your Business Operations Lead posting asks for someone who can stand up RevOps infrastructure, pipe-to-revenue models, rep performance dashboards, ROI frameworks and stage definitions, from a standing start. I built exactly that kind of system at Sensata: the FY2026 Bleeders and Leakers program, which scored 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions, 4 product families and 20 product lines, with one agreed stage definition and a win rate and dollars-per-win view by rep. It replaced a set of spreadsheets nobody trusted with a dashboard Finance and Sales both signed off on, which is the repeatable project framework with dashboards and KPI specs your first 3 to 6 months are describing.

The pricing half of the role is familiar territory too. I used that same dashboard to recover $700K+ in margin in two quarters and to raise distributor and channel-partner margins from 53% to 61%, which meant redesigning the pricing structure itself, not just flagging the gap. At PriceKeel, the company I founded, I built a guardrail engine that recommends an explainable discount boundary learned from a company's own closed-won and closed-lost deals, then put it in front of early customers as a pilot, the same test-and-learn posture your SKU and tier work will need before it scales past a first customer.

The rest of the job is execution discipline, not a single skill. At Applied Materials I carry P&L and revenue targets while running the operating cadence (leadership decks, OKRs, weekly and quarterly reviews) that keeps a cross-functional initiative visible past its first week. At PriceKeel I built the audit trail Finance can point to for every pricing decision, which is the same rigor a license-management or automated true-up tool needs to survive contact with real deals. I like taking a vague, high-leverage problem, scoping it with the people who own the boundary, and handing off a playbook that keeps working after I move to the next one.

Ambience's pitch is removing administrative weight so clinicians can do the work that matters, and that only holds if the business side scales as cleanly as the product does. I would bring the same stage-definition and pipe-to-revenue discipline that held at Sensata to implementation throughput, pricing and RevOps at Ambience.
