Hiring Team, ElevenLabs

At Sensata I built the Bleeders and Leakers Power BI dashboard: 1,200 pricing opportunities tracked against a $627M target across 3 regions and 20 product lines, with win rate, dollars per win and stage distribution broken out by salesperson. It recovered $700K plus in margin in two quarters because leadership could see exactly where to push. That is the job your posting describes for Revenue Strategy and Operations: own a GTM function end to end, from data collection to the dashboard that turns a number into a decision.

E2E process ownership is also how I run PriceKeel. I built its CRM, CPQ, forecast and pipeline review cadence and the deal-approval workflow underneath it, plus the audit trail Finance checks before anything closes, because a standardized process beats a spreadsheet that only one person understands. I would bring the same instinct to building and maintaining the automations and standardized processes your GTM teams run on, whether the partner function is SDRs, AEs, Partnerships or Account Management.

The posting asks for a trusted partner to leadership, not just a report builder, and that distinction matters to me. A dashboard that nobody reads is wasted work; one that gets read but never tested against a new workflow is only half the job. At Applied Materials I carry P&L and revenue targets, build the forecasting and market-sizing models Sales, Engineering and Accounts act on, and run the OKRs and quarterly business reviews that put those numbers in front of leadership, while automating the repetitive parts of that analysis with Claude AI agents. Your "AI first" line in the posting is not a slogan to me, it is how I already work.

I like that each person on this team is podded to a specific function instead of running generic reporting for everyone. That is a better structure: it means the strategic insight actually fits the lever that function is pulling, instead of a one-size dashboard nobody acts on. I would like to bring that same pod-level ownership to ElevenLabs. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/elevenlabs.
