Hiring Team, TrueFan AI

Your posting asks for one owner of enterprise delivery who can be the executive stakeholder on a strategic account, not a coordinator who routes tickets between Product, Engineering and Customer Success. At Sensata, that was the Bleeders and Leakers program: I was the one who turned a vague margin mandate into a $433M shortlist across 3 regions and 20 product lines, then negotiated multimillion-dollar customer quotes myself to recover $700K+ in margin in two quarters. Nobody handed me that playbook; I built the dashboard, the account priority list and the negotiation path from nothing.

I run the same motion today at PriceKeel, the B2B SaaS deal-pricing company I founded. I am the delivery owner on every enterprise pilot: scoping the engagement, standing up the CRM, CPQ and deal-approval workflow, and staying the point of contact through go-live, while building the governance and audit trail Finance signs off on. That is the SLA-adherence and account-profitability discipline your posting describes, just aimed at a different product. On the account-ownership side, I hired and managed an 8-person team across 8 strategic client accounts at Pixis, carrying P&L targets and cutting churn 50% by diagnosing retention risk before it showed up in a renewal conversation.

Tracking organization-wide OKRs and solving cross-functional bottlenecks is a weekly habit, not a special project, for me. At Applied Materials I run the OKR cadence and leadership decks that turn Sales, Engineering and Accounts input into one view for leadership, and I did the equivalent across Agile sprints with Engineering at Sensata, managing a 100+ feature backlog across 3 regions. A Founder's Office at an AI-native company moving as fast as TrueFan needs someone who has already carried that context across functions so nothing drops between them.

I would want fifteen minutes to walk through how I would run the first 90 days of enterprise delivery governance at TrueFan, built on the same shape as the Bleeders and Leakers program: find the real bottleneck, ship one decision-ready fix, then turn it into a cadence.
