Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

October 13, 2026

Hiring Team, SuprSend

Tushar's post named this role Founder's Office - GTM, and that phrase is the job, not a title someone picked for a job board: building the go-to-market motion before there is a team to split it across. I am doing that right now at PriceKeel, as its sole founder. I own the CRM, CPQ, forecast and pipeline reviews, and the deal approvals, and I am the one raising the first round with investors, because there is no one else to hand any of it to.

Before PriceKeel, I owned the go-to-market for Sensata's new sensing products across North America and Europe end to end, positioning, pricing, channel and launch, and drove $2M+ in first-year revenue on it. The analytical half runs just as deep: I built the Bleeders and Leakers dashboard, a Power BI system that ranked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions and 20 product lines, surfaced $433M in margin gaps, and once I ran the negotiations it pointed to, recovered $700K+ of that in 2 quarters. That is the build-the-dashboard-then-run-the-number pattern a Founder's Office needs, not a plan handed off for someone else to execute.

At Applied Materials now, I turn scattered input from Sales, Engineering and Accounts into one GTM-ready market view, carrying P&L and revenue targets while I do it, and I automate the repetitive half of that synthesis with AI agents built on Claude. SwipeHire, an AI job-matching platform I shipped zero-to-one, is the same habit applied to my own product: define the ICP, build the GTM and analytics stack, and hire the team that gets it to users.

Two roles open on the same post usually means a GTM function being built from the ground up, and that is the part of the job I would want: show up with the pricing, positioning and operating cadence already thought through, not a ramp-up period attached. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/suprsend.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar