Hiring Team, Klaviyo

Your posting calls mobile "no longer an add-on" and names the job a Swiss Army knife, so I will skip the warm-up and go straight to the channel mix part: at Pixis I ran Amazon Ads and Criteo retail media alongside iOS app paid user acquisition on Appsflyer and Adjust for an eight-client D2C portfolio. That is the exact seam your SMS and Mobile team sits on, where a brand's phone-based channels either compound its paid spend or compete with it. I know which lever to pull because I have pulled both sides of it.

The GTM and positioning half of this role is work I already do end to end. At Sensata I owned go-to-market for new sensing products across North America and Europe (positioning, pricing, channel, launch), defined the messaging hierarchy that turned technical specs into customer value and lifted conversion 15% on priority launches, and built the sales enablement decks and case studies that 50+ reps used to close. I also ran roadmap evangelization directly with Engineering, turning 30+ OEM and distributor interviews into a prioritized backlog instead of a wish list. That is the same muscle your posting wants pointed at carrier coverage and compliance instead of sensors.

Platforms with their own rulebook, one that shifts under you without warning, are familiar ground. At GenY Medium I untangled Google Merchant Center and Meta catalog feed rules across a portfolio of D2C brands and got them to 16x ROAS; the win there was never one clever campaign, it was reading the platform's own constraints correctly before anyone else on the team did. I expect carrier coverage and the compliance side of mobile to reward the same instinct.

One more thing worth saying plainly: I am also Strategic Marketing III at Applied Materials right now, where I automate the repetitive side of competitive analysis with AI agents built on Claude so more of the week goes to the judgment calls a roadmap actually needs. If Klaviyo wants a PMM partner who treats AI fluency as a working habit and not a buzzword, that is already how I operate. Proof trail at adhi-product-ai.vercel.app/ref/klaviyo.
