Hiring Team, Stanley Black & Decker

Your Market Intelligence posting asks for one thing above the rest: take trends and competitive activity from the US, Europe and other international markets and turn them into one clear recommendation a category leader can act on. I built the version of that at Sensata Technologies, where the FY2026 Power BI dashboard I owned modeled 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions, 4 product families and 20 product lines, surfacing $433M in margin gaps and, paired with a 10+ competitor benchmark, helping drive +8% market share and +12% YoY revenue.

The cross-regional half of the role is not new either. As Product & Growth Marketing at Sensata I ran competitor and customer analysis across EMEA and the US, turning purchasing patterns and competitor market share into revenue-opportunity calls for category leadership, after starting on the same team as an intern benchmarking the top three competitors and reviewing POS accounts for growth markets. On the consulting side, I led a 5-consultant team that took a market from 170 facilities down to a SAM of 28 and benchmarked 10+ competitors for Safran, the kind of market-sizing and feasibility work your posting names directly.

Storytelling matters as much as the analysis behind it. I build the leadership decks and run the OKRs behind quarterly business reviews at Applied Materials today, where I size the semiconductor manufacturing market with Sales, Engineering and Accounts, and I have automated the recurring version of that reporting with AI agents built on Claude so the hours go into the next cross-regional read instead of rebuilding the last one. I would want to spend the first month here the same way I did at Sensata: sit with category management and the data and analytics suppliers already in place, find where the coverage gaps actually are, and ship the first cross-regional read before the next business review.

Tools & Outdoor runs across the US, Europe and international markets the same way Sensata's Industrial BU did, and I would like to bring that market-sizing and competitive-benchmarking discipline to Stanley Black & Decker. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/stanley-black-decker.
