Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 12, 2026

Hiring Team, BeatO

Your posting asks for someone who owns the full P&L on a new business line, revenue, margins, unit economics, burn, not just the launch plan. That is the seat I am in right now at PriceKeel, the company I founded: I own the product, the pricing, the CRM and deal-approval process, and I am running pilots with real customers before anything scales further. I know what "validate quickly through low-cost experiments" actually costs because I am doing it today.

The track record you are asking for, taking a line from zero to meaningful revenue, is the same one I ran at Sensata. A vague margin mandate with no existing tool became the Bleeders and Leakers program: 1,200 opportunities ranked against a $627M target, closed into $700K+ recovered in two quarters by negotiating directly on competitive gaps and willingness to pay. Before that, I grew a new sensing-product line from zero to $2M+ in first-year revenue at the same company.

SwipeHire was my own zero-to-one build: I wrote the PRD, scoped the MVP, ran field interviews, and onboarded the first 50 users before validating three pricing tiers against what people would actually pay. I have carried P&L and revenue targets at Applied Materials and Pixis, hired and managed teams at both, and run the operating cadence a founder's office depends on.

I built a short pitch deck that maps this track record directly to the EIR mandate: finding the problem, validating it cheaply, then owning the P&L once it scales. Happy to walk through it whenever works. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/beato.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar