Hiring Team, Hinge Health

Your opening line, turning complex products into clear stories, is the job I already do. At Sensata I took a new sensing-product line with no established GTM motion and owned positioning, pricing, channel and launch end to end, from zero to $2M+ in first-year revenue across North America and Europe.

The approval and enablement half of your role is the part I have the clearest proof for. I translated technical sensor specs into customer-facing value propositions that lifted conversion 15% on priority launches, then built the decks, case studies and objection-handling resources that let 50+ reps actually sell a technical product, lifting win rates 30%. I ran 30+ customer interviews with OEMs and distributors to find where the story was breaking, and the fixes those interviews drove raised CSAT 22%.

The cross-functional half is a habit, not a stretch. At Applied Materials I turn scattered input from Sales, Engineering and Accounts into one market view without owning any of those teams, the same influence-without-authority your basic qualifications name directly. I pair that with SQL and GA4 work that separates real adoption signal from reach, which matters if year one is measuring both.

I would welcome the chance to walk through how I would approach the first new vertical: find the approval blocker, build the enablement around it, then measure adoption separately from reach. Proof trail at adhi-product.vercel.app/ref/hinge-health.
