Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 9, 2026

Hiring Team, Coinbase

Your posting says own problems end to end, from framing through analysis, recommendation and implementation, not just the slide deck. That is the exact shape of the Bleeders and Leakers program I built at Sensata: I framed a $627M pricing-opportunity pipeline, built the quantitative model that surfaced $433M in margin gaps across 3 regions and 20 product lines, and then stayed on the negotiations until $700K+ came back in two quarters. The business case was the easier half; the governance that got Sales and Finance to actually act on it was the harder one, and the one I enjoy most.

At Sensata I also shaped AP26 revenue models and site-transition strategy directly with senior executives, and benchmarked 10+ competitors to sharpen positioning and peer-benchmark calls, the same competitive-positioning muscle your posting asks for applied to a different market. At Applied Materials I build the forecasting and market-sizing financial models that turn Sales, Engineering and Account input into one view leadership can act on, and I run that analysis through Claude agents with a person checking every output before it reaches a deck, not the other way around.

The hypothesis-and-experiment line in your posting is where I would push back a little on how most strategy teams run it: a business case that cannot point to the specific test that will prove or kill it is still just a slide. At Plug Power I ran 15+ A/B tests tied to pipeline stage, not just click-through, and at Simon Vision Consulting I led five classmates through a market-sizing and entry-feasibility study for Safran, from 170 facilities down to a SAM of 28 and a 10+ competitor benchmark, presented straight to their leadership. That is the closest rep I have to the ambiguous, senior-stakeholder problem framing this seat needs, and I would bring the same habit to whichever of Consumer, Institutional, Base or Stablecoins the placement process lands on.

Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/coinbase.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar