Hiring Team, Outset

Your posting says the second person on Revenue Operations at Outset owns Salesforce admin, the HubSpot sync, ARR truth and deal desk, all at once, with AI tools doing a lot of the heavy lifting. That mix is close to the job I already run at PriceKeel: I set up and operate the company's own CRM and CPQ, including deal desk approvals, order-form and discount checks, and forecast and pipeline reviews, and I built the audit trail that gives Finance one clean, contract-level record of every discount decision rather than a spreadsheet nobody fully trusts.

The ARR-truth problem you describe, reconciling by contract so nothing gets double counted, is the same discipline behind the Bleeders and Leakers dashboard I built at Sensata: 1,200 opportunities tracked against a $627M target across 3 regions and 20 product lines, with win rate, avg dollars per win and stage distribution broken out by salesperson. I did not just build the dashboard; I went back into the CRM records feeding it and caught mismatched product-line tags and stale pipeline stages before they skewed a number leadership was about to act on. That same quarter the fixes it surfaced recovered over $700K in margin.

Claude and similar AI tools are already a default part of how I work, not a layer bolted on afterward. At Applied Materials I use them to build forecasting and market-sizing models and to automate the recurring parts of the reporting cycle, and I lean on the same habit at PriceKeel when a pricing or discount question needs a fast, well-caveated answer. I also know what makes an AE's week harder: at Sensata I built the enablement that got 50+ reps a straight answer instead of a guess, which is the same first-call-when-something-is-broken role this seat plays for Outset's AEs and SDRs.

Outset is scaling its GTM stack fast enough that one person running all of it is now the bottleneck, and that is exactly the seat I want: take a real, growing share of Salesforce admin, pipeline hygiene and deal desk off the Director's plate and make the ARR number something the CRO and board do not have to double-check.
