Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

November 8, 2026

Hiring Team, Confidential Client (via TargetHR)

Your posting calls this a business-owner seat, not a traditional strategy or ops role, and that line is the reason I am writing. At PriceKeel, the company I founded, I do not advise on the P&L, I own it: I set pricing and investment decisions, run the CRM and CPQ, sit in the forecast and pipeline reviews, and sign off on deal approvals myself, because there is no one else to hand any of it to.

I have also turned a flagged number into a funded one before. At Sensata I built and ran the Bleeders and Leakers program end to end: a Power BI system that ranked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions and 20 product lines, surfacing $433M in margin gaps for leadership and closing $700K+ of that gap in two quarters through direct negotiation with Sales and Finance. Pulling a new revenue stream out of an existing business runs on the same instinct whether the opportunity sits in margin or in a new segment.

I know what building the team under that P&L looks like too. I shipped SwipeHire, an AI job-matching platform, solo end to end: the PRD, the MVP, the first 50+ users, and the hiring and management of the team that got it there. At Pixis I carried P&L and revenue targets for an 8-person team running 8 client accounts directly, the same scope this seat is describing at a different starting point.

What I would bring to the Founder's Office here is a founder's habit of owning the number instead of reporting on it, plus the operating cadence, OKRs, leadership decks, and weekly and quarterly reviews, that keep that ownership visible to the people above me. Proof trail at adhithyabhaskar.vercel.app/ref/targethr.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar