

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar

San Francisco Bay Area, CA | arokhith@gmail.com | +1-929-563-9974

September 22, 2026

Hiring Team, ScopeX

At Plug Power I owned $100K/month in acquisition budgets across multiple business units and had to make every dollar answer to CPA and conversion, not clicks. That is the instinct your Head of Growth needs on day one: ScopeX already has a growth playbook that works in Europe, and the job is not to invent a new one for the US, it is to run the same math faster while the attribution stays honest all the way to a completed transfer.

I have run that full loop before: paid and lifecycle side by side, not as two separate teams. At Pixis I hired and managed an 8-person team across 8 client accounts, cut churn 50% with retention playbooks built off what each account's own cohorts were actually saying, and ran PPC across international, non-English markets alongside retail media and iOS app UA on AppsFlyer and Adjust. At Sensata I generated 35% more qualified leads and lifted conversion 15% running GTM across North America and Europe at the same time, so I know firsthand how differently acquisition, trust and regulation read on each side of the Atlantic. None of that was paid-only: SEO partnerships, referral-shaped lead flow automation, and the kind of channel work that does not stop at the ad account.

I am also building PriceKeel right now as the sole operator, running GTM, pilots and fundraising myself, which is the same founder's-seat instinct ScopeX is hiring for: reporting directly in, owning the number, and moving on data instead of waiting for a deck. A category built around trust with a diaspora audience needs a growth leader who treats CAC, LTV and payback as the actual product, not a marketing side metric, and that is how I have run every budget I have owned.

Proof trail at adhi-growth-ai.vercel.app/ref/scopex.

Adhithya Rokhith Bhaskar