Hiring Team, Salesforce

Your posting asks for someone who reviews complex deals on behalf of Strategic Business Practices, guides Sales on the tradeoffs of a deal structure, and owns the final approval decision. That is the exact loop I ran inside Sensata's Bleeders and Leakers program: deal-by-deal review of discount exceptions, built on competitive gaps and each customer's own willingness to pay, that recovered $700K plus in margin in two quarters. In the same window I restructured concession terms on parts sold through distribution and moved distributor margins from 53% to 61%, the kind of concession strategy that optimizes revenue without giving away the margin behind it.

I have also built the governance side of that same gate, not just approved what crossed it. PriceKeel, the company I founded, reads a live discount exception inside the deal platform and recommends a guardrail learned from a company's own closed-won and closed-lost deals. I built the audit trail that gives Finance a record it can review on its own, and I run deal approvals against it daily. That is the same trusted-advisor discipline your posting describes: partner with Sales Leadership, take ownership of the final call, and leave a record Finance and Legal can both stand behind.

The AI fluency Salesforce is built on is not new to me either. At Applied Materials I automate repetitive pricing and forecasting analysis with Claude agents, freeing analyst time for the judgment calls a deal desk still needs a person for, which is the same instinct I would bring to an organization putting Agentforce to work on its own deal processes rather than treating AI as a feature bolted on top.

The partnership with product teams your posting asks for on pricing models for new products and bundled solutions is also familiar ground: at Sensata I owned GTM pricing for new sensing products across North America and Europe, and at Applied Materials I build competitive, value-based pricing for a market still finding its inflection points. I would bring that same cross-functional habit, working with Finance, Legal and Operations, to Salesforce's own deal desk. Proof trail at adhi-pricing-ai.vercel.app/ref/salesforce.
