Hiring Team, Decagon

Your posting asks for someone to develop pricing and packaging strategy, own end-to-end deal strategy, and build the internal commercial processes a Founder's Office runs on. I have already done all three for a company I own. PriceKeel, the business I founded, reads a live discount exception inside the deal platform and recommends an explainable guardrail learned from each company's own closed-won and closed-lost deals. I set up and run its CRM, CPQ, forecast and pipeline reviews, and deal approvals myself, and I built the audit trail that gives Finance evidence it can trust. That is pricing strategy, packaging and commercial-process building done end to end, not delegated.

Before PriceKeel, I led global pricing strategy for Sensata's Industrial BU, a multi-$100M business, through the Bleeders and Leakers program: deal-by-deal negotiation built on competitive gaps and customer willingness to pay that recovered $700K plus in margin in two quarters and lifted distributor margins from 53% to 61%. I negotiated the multimillion-dollar customer proposals that closed those deals directly with senior executives, and I built the FY2026 Power BI dashboard that tracked 1,200 pricing opportunities against a $627M target across 3 regions, 4 product families and 20 product lines. That is the enterprise deal strategy and proposal work your posting describes, run at the scale a Founder's Office generalist seat is expected to operate at.

The agentic-AI angle is not theoretical for me either. As Strategic Marketing III at Applied Materials I build competitive, value-based pricing and inflection-point forecasting for a market moving as fast as yours, and I automate the recurring analysis behind it with AI agents built on Claude. Pricing an agentic AI product from the inside, the way PriceKeel prices its own category, is a different vantage point than pricing one from the outside, and it is the one I would bring to how Decagon prices its own agentic solutions.

I like that this role sits inside a small team of generalists and ex-founders rather than a traditional pricing department. That is the environment I already operate in daily as PriceKeel's founder, and it is why I think the fit runs both ways. Proof trail at adhi-pricing-ai.vercel.app/ref/decagon.
